

B.2 Rationalist Way

Puzzle by: Andrew Coker
Difficulty: Hard

cisra Puzzle Competition 2008
<http://puzzle.cisra.com.au>

Smashing through the wall with a dinosaur bone may yet rank amongst your biggest achievements of the day. But it's left you no better off. The wood-panelled museum halls soak up the emergency lighting, and as you search for an emergency exit (clutching an ancient femur) the echoes of your footsteps seem to slide in and out of time with your footfalls. This strangely winding corridor has no doors at all. By now you don't care if your friends are playing an elaborate joke on you. You'd welcome any living contact.

You see a crumpled pamphlet on a side table, sitting in a bowl of a tiny upside-down skull. Trying not to touch the powdery brown-stained bone, you extract the pamphlet and smooth it, noting the hand-drawn annotations. Could this be a way out?

